

An Enchanted Map of Scotland

Callanish Stones
Isle of Lewis

The Fairy Glen
Isle of Skye

Loch Ness

Glencoe

Glen Etive

The Kelpies

Slains Castle

Crathes Castle

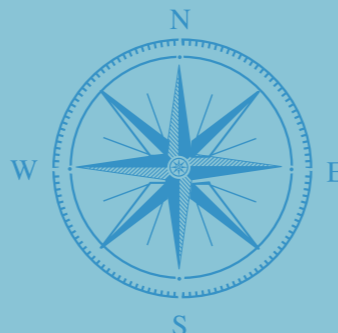

Dunnottar Castle

Eyemouth

Castle Kennedy

Callanish Stones Isle of Lewis

The Callanish Stones on the Isle of Lewis are steeped in myth and mystery. Legends claim they were once giants turned to stone for defying Christianity. Thought to serve as an astronomical calendar or sacred ritual site, these ancient stones embody Scotland's rich folklore and celestial connections.

Loch Ness

Visit Loch Ness for a chance to spy the world-famous Nessie, a long-necked beast said to dwell in the water's dark, mysterious depths. With sightings dating back to 565 AD, our Nessie is Scotland's most popular mystical creature, drawing visitors from across the world on the hunt for a glimpse of the monster, the myth, the legend.

Stay at Loch Ness Shores Camping & Caravanning Club campsite

Glencoe

Glencoe's haunting beauty and dark history, including the 1692 Massacre of Clan MacDonald, inspire tales of ghosts, eerie cries, and Celtic legend amongst locals. Mist-laden peaks echo with ancient warnings and mournful voices, making this glen a captivating destination for mythical adventures and exploration.

Stay at Glencoe Camping & Caravanning Club Campsite

Dunnottar Castle

Dunnottar Castle, towering above the North Sea, is steeped in history and legend. Ghostly tales include a girl in green and protective spirits said to have safeguarded the Scottish Crown Jewels during Cromwell's siege. Its rugged setting and whispered treasures enhance its timeless mystique.

Stay at Seaton Estate Holiday Park

Glen Etive

Glen Etive, the "Valley of the Sun" in Gaelic, blends natural beauty with mysticism. Known for healing waters and links to the mournful soul of Deirdre of the Sorrows, its tranquil solitude carries an otherworldly energy, as if spirits of the past still linger amid its serene landscapes.

Stay at Argyll Caravan Park

Castle Kennedy

Castle Kennedy, encircled by stunning gardens, carries tales of love, loss, and the supernatural. The ruins are said to be haunted by a "Lady in White," a heartbroken noblewoman's ghost. Strange lights and unexplained sounds in the gardens deepen the castle's enduring aura of mystery.

Stay at Whitecairn Holiday Park

Slains Castle

Thought to have been the inspiration for the novel Dracula, Slains Castle's windswept gothic ruins look out over Cruden Bay in Aberdeenshire. Behind its walls lay eerie stories and echoey halls. Locals speak of figures roaming its dark corridors, while whispers of ancient rituals held by its cliffs suggest it may have been a place of power and mystery long before its stone walls were raised.

Stay at Stonehaven Queen Elizabeth Park Club Campsite

The Fairy Glen Isle of Skye

The Fairy Glen is a surreal, dreamlike landscape where folklore says fairies dwell. Its conical hills and spirals of stones are thought to be the work of Skye's fairies. It's said that if you walk the spirals or leave offerings, they may appear or grant a blessing of good fortune.

Stay at Skye Camping & Caravanning Club Site

Crathes Castle

Located in the picturesque town of Banchory, Crathes Castle is rich in supernatural lore and history. Stop in and visit the castle's resident ghostie, The Green Lady. Sightings of her holding an infant are not uncommon, and hark back to the tragic and unexplained disappearance of a servant girl and her baby. Visitors have reported sudden chills and unexplained noises in her presence - are you brave enough?

Stay at Silverbank Club Campsite

The Kelpies

The Kelpies, 30-meter sculptures in Falkirk, celebrate Scottish folklore's mythical water horses. These shape-shifters, appearing as horses or humans, lured travelers to watery graves, embodying the peril of Scotland's waterways. The sculptures immortalise their mystique and power, blending mythology with striking artistry on Scotland's central belt.

Stay at Keltie Bridge Caravan Park

Eyemouth

Eyemouth's allure lies in its tragic maritime history and folklore. The 1881 Great Storm claimed over 180 fishermen, and ghostly lanterns are said to guide their spirits home. Legends of selkies—seal-like beings walking as humans—add to the mystique of this village steeped in sea-bound tales.

Stay at Coldstream Holiday Park